Practical policies and procedures that support the real-world officer's experience is critical for law enforcement. For agencies looking to enlist an Early Intervention System (EIS), it's critical to establish and maintain specific policies that 1) assist employees getting back on track 2) aid supervisors in their planning and support of officers and 3) build trust that EIS is a support tool. Having clear policies in place will impact the integrity and success of your EIS.

Join Benchmark CEO Ron Huberman and our esteemed panel of agency leaders for a best-practice discussion on EIS policies. Key discussion points will include:

- Establishing an overall process for prompt review of flagged officers
- Determining key agency stakeholders as well as their roles and responsibilities within the review process
- Categorizing levels of at-risk behaviors (e.g., Minimal, Advisable, Actionable)
- Developing non-punitive interventions
- Building training and mentoring resources
